SUBJECT: Third Meeting of the CIPC CBW Intelligence Subcommittee,

2. [redacted] of the Intelligence Community Staff (Programming and Budget Staff) addressed the meeting on the manner in which changes can be made to present and programmed resource allocations. The key points of his discussion included:

- FY '87: There are two methods by which changes can be inserted into the budgetary process.
 - Non-NFIC activity can be included in the Service's POM. Guidance is presently going to the commands; it was noted that the Service POM scheduling dates differ. Requirements should be submitted now so that they can compete for priority within the Services. An item can enter the Service POM schedule at any command level; it can be entered even as late as the Summer Issue Cycle if it is judged significant.
 - The intelligence programming cycle is somewhat later than the non-NFIC cycle. GDIP guidance is distributed October through December, depending on the Service, with the budget being constructed by the agencies in the December-January time frame. The requirements must also be in the Planning Document and must be given sufficient priority to insure their inclusion.

- FY '86: It is too late to make any changes in non-NFIC programs; the Summer Issue Cycle is complete, and the Defense Resources Board has already met. There is essentially no time left to effect changes to NFIC programs; the absolute cutoff date to do so would be 1 November 1984.
- FY '85: These funds have already been appropriated; they have passed the Programming and Budget phase and are now in the Execution phase. Since the Commanders, not the ACSIs, execute the program, there may be considerable leeway for acquiring excess contractual funds and other "returned" monies. It is crucial to make the responsible officials aware of unfunded requirements (both NFIC and non-NFIC) so that they are competitive for those funds that may become unexpectedly available.
- In summary, if the Subcommittee is to make an impact on resources, it will be in FY '87. There can be no increase in manpower authorizations for a specific function prior to that time.

3. The members discussed the revised Terms of Reference (TOR) which had been distributed to them on 23 October 1984. The members accepted the TOR with a revision which specified that the Subcommittee will function only for 6-12 months. Attachment 2 is a copy of the TOR which is being distributed to the CIPC principals.

4. The members then discussed the draft schedule for the remainder of its meetings. Attachment 3 incorporates the revisions suggested by the members.

5. The next meeting will be held on Monday, 5 November 1984 at 0900 hours in Room 1S06 of the [redacted] for presentations by AFMIC and FSTC. A trip to CRDC at Edgewood Arsenal is tentatively planned for Monday, 19 November 1984.
